Julie began her work in the legal arena 15 years ago as a legal secretary and then as a paralegal. Now, working in administration, she uses her varied legal knowledge, interspersed with experience in banking and administration in higher education, as a solid foundation to effectively address the challenges faced in law firms. In addition to the firm's human resource functions, Julie also handles much of the firm's marketing needs.

"I work with a wonderful group of individuals at FMJ. We have a unique and caring culture. I strive every day to continue to make this an extraordinary place to work."

The Rest of the Story:

Julie and her husband, Brian, are kept busy raising two daughters. In her infrequent spare time, Julie enjoys reading, great food and getting together with friends. When home, she likes to cook with occasionally sketchy results. Her husband, new to cooking, is quickly eclipsing her talents, but since she gets to enjoy the results, she's not too upset about it.

Power of the Big.
Spirit of the Small.
